

Biographical Sketch

Nikos K. Logothetis

Nikos K. Logothetis is now Co-Director (together with Mu-Ming Poo) of the International Center for Primate Brain Research (ICPBR) in Shanghai, China. Since 1.1.2022 he is also Emeritus Director of the Max Planck Institute for Biological Cybernetics (MPI-BC) in Tübingen, Germany, and Emeritus Adjunct Professor of the Victoria University of Manchester (VUoM), Manchester, UK.

He received a B.S. in mathematics from the University of Athens and a B.S. in biology from the University of Thessaloniki. He studied Piano in the Hellenic Conservatory of Athens and received his Ph.D. in human neurobiology from the Ludwig-Maximilian University in Munich. In 1985 he moved to the Brain and Cognitive Sciences Department of Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), where he initially worked as a postdoctoral fellow and later as Research Scientist.

Webseite: https://www.icpbr.ac.cn/lab/logothetis/people/202307/t20230712_170621.html